Books, Film and Music

September has been an emotional rollercoaster with these two books!

I loved Every Summer After by Carley Fortune. It's a classic summer read: a friends to lovers, coming of age romance. Told in two timelines, in the past one it is a lovely slow burn, showing the blooming relationship between Sam and Percy across the summers of their teens. The present timeline sees them have the opportunity to revisit the events that tore them apart, and try to forgive. A really sweet story, but the spice is there too.

Daisy Jones and The Six by Taylor Jenkins Reid, the story of a 70s rock band told in interview format, was a reread for me. I liked the book, but in audiobook format it blew me away. The cast of narrators are outstanding and for me created an intense emotional connection with the characters. In audio this will easily be one of my top reads of the year. I can't wait to see the tv series starring Sam Claflin (The Hunger Games, Me Before You) as tortured lead singer Billy Dunn and Riley Keough (Elvis's granddaughter!) as the inimitable Daisy Jones.

I've been listening to Midnight Oil, an iconic Australian band that my husband and I saw as teens (we'd been together three weeks!) at a music festival many, many years ago. We were lucky enough to be in the front row at their concert last week, as they wind up their final ever tour. I just love seeing artists who are just as good and relevant now as they were in the past. Farewell guys, you will always be special to us.

Author Update

Caroline's writing life

I've been totally focused on the final edits and formatting for Tangled Paths these past few weeks. Fortunately I'm often at my best with a deadline looming, and am confident that everything will be ready for launch day. I've also had the wonderful experience of collaborating with a group of indie authors on a book tour over on Instagram to promote it. I continue to be thankful for the amazing support authors offer to each other. With everyone cheering each other on, it's a pleasure to be part of this community. Finally, once it is launched, I've booked myself a whole week away to work on my next book, Tangled Hearts. It will be wonderful to immerse myself in the story again. Those characters have been nagging me, and I keep telling them to wait their turn. It's coming!

Caroline's Corner Welcome to my world

My house, my castle

I'm sitting writing this at the dining table in our new house. I haven't got my writing nook set up yet, but it's coming. After so many delays, to finally be here is a treat, even if there are a few things to be finished. One of the nicest parts is seeing the decisions you've made, some a long time ago, all come together in a beautiful new home.

Spring has arrived in New Zealand.

Probably my least favourite season, with its unpredictable weather. It always lures me into putting on more summery clothes, before ambushing me with icy wind and rain reminiscent of winter. I am very envious of you in the north, enjoying fall-my favourite season! Today I was telling a friend how I have seen mentions of gorgeous pumpkin spice lattes all over social media although we don't usually get them here. But tonight I wanted to run into the Nespresso shop and hug them-they emailed to say Pumpkin Spice Cake coffee is in store here! Guess where I'm off to tomorrow...

Until next time, take care

Caroline
