I've Got News!

I'm starting this month with some exciting news about my next release.

As you can see, The Twelve Days of Christmas has a beautiful new illustrated cover created by a talented Kiwi artist named Ollie. The amount of detail is incredible. Zoom in to check out Christian's tattoos!

I love it so much, I've now got her working on some character art. And yes, there will be dogs.

As well as using the art for promotion, I'll be offering it to thank ARC Readers and Street Team members.

If you'd be interested in doing one or both of those things, be ready to sign up in next month's newsletter! Or drop me an email message now if you're already ready to go: caroline@carolinecorvin.com with ARC and/or Street Team in the subject line.

And I'll let you in on a spicy little secret...once Ollie has finished this project, I'm commissioning her to do a NSFW piece. You know how books always have that one memorable 🌶️🌶️🌶️ scene? That's the one 😏

To match the refreshed cover, I've also updated the blurb. Click through below to read it, where you can also preorder the book at the pre-release price.

Christmas

In honour of me finishing B.K. Borison's fabulous series set in the gorgeous small town of Idlewild, this month's book giveaway is the first book, Lovelight Farms. Each book takes place in a different season, this one winter (what else on a Christmas tree farm?!)

In an effort to save the Christmas tree farm she's loved since she was a kid, Stella enters a contest with Instagram-famous influencer Evelyn St. James. Small problem—she lied on her application and now she needs her best friend, Luka, to fake date her to create the perfect romantic story for the rest of the world to see. But to do that she also needs the rest of the town to believe it too. Enter below to win.

Last month's winner, Kristina, was extra lucky, as the lovely author of Holiday Star, Dr. Melissa Dymond, offered to send her a signed copy direct. Thank you Melissa 😊

I have Melissa's latest, Paging Dr. Hart, on my TBR. A medical romance with a touch of suspense, also available in spicy or sweet versions.

It has great reviews! Check it out below:

Caroline's writing life

I've dived straight back into the first draft of Blindsided By You, Book 1 in the Heartlands series. She's the rugby coach's daughter. He's in the team—and also younger brother of her childhood friend. But from the moment they meet again after ten years, sparks fly. I'm having the best time writing this book.

My side project has been writing the first chapter of Book 2 in the Stellar Riot Christmas series, My Little Drummer Boy. This follows Haley's friend Rachel (we meet her in The Twelve Days of Christian), who is trying to resist her attraction to the band's drummer, Teddy.

Finally, I've been playing around for ideas for a bonus epilogue for The Twelve Days of Christian, but I'm undecided which direction to take. And that's where you come in. I've got two options. Help me decide! Click on the link below and vote for your choice. From all those who vote, I'll draw out someone to win a $10 Amazon gift card

Books, films and music

"I'm in love with you."

"Again?"

"Still."

Reading: Another exceptional reading month for me. It was bittersweet getting to Business Casual, the final Lovelight Farms book. I'm sad to not be going back to Idlewild except in rereads. Charlie was the sweetest MMC and so prepared to show up for feisty Nova. It's a no-strings attachment where both catch feelings while trying to hide it all from nosy but well-meaning family and friends.

However my book of the month, and a new forever favourite, was Jessica Joyce's The Ex Vows. This is the perfect second chance romance with past, present, and the years in between woven together in a truly beautiful story. Eli and Georgia's broken relationship had me in tears, as well as holding my breath hoping for their happiness. I thought Theo in Jessica's first book, You With A View, topped the list of grand gestures, but Eli takes romantic to a new level. I'm going to need this book in multiple formats. Check out my socials for my reviews of these and other books.

Watching: I'm watching One Day, which I'm loving although I sense heartache ahead. Dex and Emma, from totally opposite worlds, he wealthy and privileged, her ordinary, meet in Edinburgh on the night of their university graduation. In each episode we see them on the same day across twenty years. These two have me so invested. I just want to leap into the TV and tell them to get out of the friend zone. I haven't read the book, by David Nicholls, but I need to, soon. Why not hurt myself twice over?

Listening/Watching:

Tangled Hearts

Tangled Past

I'm both sad and a little relieved that the Olympics have come to an end. It's been amazing watching the triumphs and disappointments of the athletes, but it's played havoc with my sleep schedule. Each night I ended up staying up past my bedtime as one after the other event came on the television. Catching glimpses of Paris, an incredibly beautiful city, during the coverage was a bonus.

Every Olympics is filled with special moments. This time two stand out for me. One was watching New Zealand canoeist, Lisa Carrington, pick up three gold medals, taking her to a total of eight, and making her our most decorated Olympian. It's inspiring to see women's sport taking the centre stage.

My other favourite Olympic moment was the coverage of women's long jump gold medal winner, Tara Davis-Woodhall, in particular the camera capturing her husband's incredible support. Truly beautiful to see his belief, encouragement, and love put out there for the world to see. If you haven't seen it, I suggest you search for it and watch. Love seeing real life romance! 💕
