Hi from sunshine and summer in New Zealand, where I've left my favourite spot on the deck to come in and chat with you. Please don't hate me, Northern Hemisphere friends! It's so weird sitting on a zoom with my Canadian-based PA wearing shorts and a t-shirt while she's all bundled up with a cosy fire in the background. One thing is certain, books are the best companions for any season!

Author Update

Not so many new words on the page this month, but lots of improved ones as I work hard on editing my draft of Blindsided By You. One week and it's flying off digitally to my editor in New York. I wish I could deliver it in person! Some of my author friends hate editing, but I love it. It's a chance to fall in love with your characters all over again. I know you're going to fall in love with Jenna and Geordie too. This black cat/golden retriever pairing trying to hide their forbidden relationship, at the same time as trying to hide their true feelings, has been fun to write.

Did you see we have a release date? I know I said April, and then May, but this early June date allows me to do justice to the book and the launch. I'll be looking for ARC readers too...just saying. Email me if you want now, or wait for the sign up form coming early May.

Monthly Book Giveaway

Leaning into cosy winter vibes!

For those who are still stuck in winter, or others who want a respite from summer, this month I'm giving away a paperback copy of The Twelve Days of Christian. As many of my reviewers said, this is not only a Christmas book—check out all the tropes! The winner will also get a signed bookplate and some Twelve Days stickers. If you've already got the ebook or read it in KU, enter below and the paperback could be yours!

Reading: Here are four I read from the last month. I've been saving Better Hate Than Never until Chloe Liese's next book in this series was out. Loved this one! Chloe always brings the goods and now I can grab Book 3. This Summer Will Be Different by Carley Fortune was a great dual timeline, best friend's brother romance, but it was the setting on Prince Edward Island that captivated me. Must visit! The Wall of Winnipeg and Me by Mariana Zapata was very long, but somehow I just couldn't stop listening. I felt like the FMC was sitting in my car telling me this story with no filter whatsoever. I also had a soft spot for the grumpy, awkward NFL player MMC. With perfect timing, I finished it the day before the Superbowl! Surprise of the month was the naughty but totally seductive audio novella Can I Tell You Something by Holly June Smith. Another brother's best friend, but in this one the friend is also an audio erotica voice actor. And you guessed it, she's one of his listeners. So much fun!

Watching: My husband has been away so I had full control of the remote for two weeks. Loved the Scottish police cold case series Karen Pirie, and then found an old but fun series called Satisfaction about a guy who, through a series of unexpected events, becomes a male escort. I also watched the Superbowl. I'm still wowed by the sheer spectacle of American sports. And now I understand the rules, I can appreciate the game too!

Listening: I've gone country! A couple of friends went to see Luke Combs and now I've listened to some, I like it! It fits quite well with my work in progress, as Geordie has a bit of a cowboy vibe going on...

Caroline's Corner of the World

Here's a little summer beach shot to inspire envy. The truth is I only got to do this for a few days but it certainly was blissful. I've got my heart set on a house near the beach one day, as it's my happy place.

While I'm lucky to live in a home with beautiful rural views, and a river winding away in the distance, there's nothing like the smell of the sea! How about you? Mountain, river or sea? Or a bit of everything?

Reply if you want and tell me about your happy place!
